ARTIST'S STATEMENT

My paintings and sculptures are based on a design principle of subtraction and minimalism. By limiting information, the works engage the imagination and the mind connects the dots and tubes.

Painting in dots or sculpting with tubes as a style is a good metaphor for the way limited information can be used to create clarity that is far more compelling and indelible in the viewer's mind than something perfectly concrete and complete.

My sculptures are a natural evolution of my paintings into true three-dimensional space. The dots are transformed into thousands of metal painted tubes that are individually welded together, one by one, a painstaking tedious process.

The mind's ability to connect, blend and bend the disparate dots and tubes into varied compositions makes for a unique type of style and art which I like to call modern pointillism.

UNFILTERED SERIES

The unfiltered series projects an unavoidable part of human behavior that is at the core of its very own existence.

The unfiltered human experience can sometimes suggest a darker side which is more common than not, rooted within the primitive brain and the instinctual self.

The unfiltered series is also a refreshing depiction of openness, purity and authenticity. It is depicted in dots that soften the context thus lessening the viewers instinctive tendency to recoil.

It projects sensuality, female empowerment, evolving sexual preferences and contemporary behavioral observations in a rich display of dynamic human interplay and beauty.
